

From: The Gosselins
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/21/02 11:49am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Gentlemen: Having read some of the depositions concerning the "Microsoft Settlement", we have come to a resounding conclusion. If NETSCAPE NAVIGATOR, an Internet browser, were available on our present WINDOWS 98 OPERATING SYSTEM, we would certainly use it and have no qualms about it. It should be made available to all PC users. And furthermore, we now believe a competitive browser market would greatly assist other cross-platform Java based developers, especially, in obtaining cross-platform Java technology distributed to end users such as ourselves through the open distribution of non-Microsoft Internet browsers. We appreciate this opportunity for offering our comments.
Sincerely, Donald E. and Yolande MA Gosselin; 1784 Providence Road; Northbridge MA 01534-1204